

1. Correct. The answer is true. We would like to make choices in an economically efficient way, which has led some economists to call economics, the science of choice. As you go through the course think about how you can apply the optimizing principles and methodology to your own life.