

5. Correct. The answer is true. Musgrave and Musgrave (1989) argue that the income tax is probably the best tax. Their criteria are that a good tax structure should minimize interference with economic decisions, be equitable with everyone paying their fair share, facilitate use of stabilization policy, be nonarbitrary and understandable, and have low administrative and compliance cost.