

9. Correct. The answer is true. A daily load curve shows electricity consumption throughout the day. Base load is demand that is constant throughout the day and night, while peak load is consumption that only occurs during times of peak power demand.