

7. Correct. The answer is true. Independent system operators are developing to dispatch power sometimes in conjunction with a power pool that uses bids to determine price and allocations. FERC has also required all utilities involved in interstate commerce to join a regional transmission organization to facilitate sales in the wholesale market.