

10. Correct. The answer is true. The regulatory-induced transfer of the merchant function to other segments of the natural gas industry has changed the factors that drive transaction costs. This change has influenced the choice of governance (from unified to bilateral, to market) and also affected the contract structure.