

15. Correct. The answer is true. Uncertainty tends to decrease contract length, more specific assets tend to increase the formality of the governance structure, and more frequent transactions may decrease formality and make people more likely to use the spot market.