

31. Correct. The answer is false. This organized trade is an example of market governance as it is suitable for an asset that is nonspecific and is traded frequently. The market for natural gas is liquid enough to provide a true market value.