

37. Correct. The answer is false. Released capacity is pipeline carrying capacity that is no longer under contract. The original contract has expired and the capacity is available for purchase in the market.