

2. Incorrect. The answer is false not true. Unless a monopsonist is able to price discriminate, she will have to pay all units more if she buys a higher quantity. For this reason the marginal factor cost or the cost of the last unit is higher than the average price paid for all units.