

17. Correct. The answer is false. Backstops are usually environmentally friendly technologies, which are currently more expensive to develop than standard technologies.