

6. Incorrect. The answer is false not true. Pollution is called an externality because it is a cost generated by an economic agent, which causes a loss of welfare to another external economic agent.