

7. Incorrect. The answer is false not true. Externalities can be either positive or negative. For example, infrastructure often has positive externalities and generates significant growth potential. Job creation and formation of human capital (education or training) are other examples of positive externalities in the energy field.