

1. Correct The answer is false. Oil is the largest source of energy across the world (40%), followed by natural gas (23%), and coal (22%). Most of the remainder is hydropower except for a small quantity of geothermal and renewables.