

1. Correct. The answer is true. A good way to extend oil resources is to increase efficiency in extraction. With primary recovery oil rises to the surface naturally or with the help lift from pumps. Typical primary recovery rates are 10%. With secondary recovery, water or natural gas are injected into the field to increase the pressure, which may bring recovery rates up to 40%.