

7. Correct. The answer is true. Fossil resources may be extended by technology but in the end economically profitable reserves will eventually run out. However, it is possible to extend the revenues from natural resources by using the rents to invest in foreign assets or other forms of capital. Thus the fossil reserves can provide the funds to build up other forms of capital and diversify their economies.