

17. Correct. The answer is false. Wealth in such countries depends too much on rent dispatching by government. A powerful government means a relative low efficiency and a high level of corruption. In fact, the Gini index is usually high in those countries and the poor's living standard is not good.