

4. Correct. The answer is true. From the McWorld culture's point of view, the world is one large market connected by high information networks moving towards automation and homogenization. On the other hand, extremist Jihad cultures resist modern capitalization and cling to religious beliefs, ethnic traditions, and local and national communities.